OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE CITY.

FRIDAY MORNING, : : : : DEC. 15, 1871.

FOR MAYOR,

JOHN JOHNSON

THE BEGGAR AND THE BANKER. The people of Memphis desire the services of a good financier, but they are not ambitious to elect a mayor who, in the course of ten or twelve years, can amass a colossal fortune out of a petty county office. It is notoriously true that John Loague came to Memphis a few years since with his fortune in his carpetbag. It was said that his horse was so leaves the country a blank. For sixteen b anket to keep the wind from blowing the | when there were not half a dozon of this grass out through his ribs; and when the prolific family fattening on public pap, norse died he was so light, that the blank- Surely the age of reform has dawned upon et, not knowing he was gone, remained us, suspended in mid-air. This poor horse was an inflated balloon in comparison with the flabby and impecualous Loague, space to-day to important documents af-But fortune smiled upon her favorite feeting the people of this State and of child. The casualties of war snatched Arkansus John Losque from his saloon and occupation as pedler, and brought him to the front. By one of those mysteries which is his successor in the internal revenue neither science nor philosophy can explain, he was found lord of all he sur-wayed, in the office of county court clerk. How much he was worth when he entered upon his duties as public functionary, the records of the county and city tax collectors will show. But Loague seems to be a shifty fellow. He went into office a beggar, and in the short space of six or seven years he comes out a banker. This is a specimen of financiering which would do credit to Tweed in his palmiest days. We do not mean to insinuate that John Losque ever stole a dollar; but f he can make a fortune out of a he make as mayor of Memphis?
Such insarcial sbility as John Loague has developed during the last ten years ought not to be neglected. To acquire wealth is the ambition of every youth, and Mr. Loague can add vastly to his already inflated coffers if he will deliver a course of lectures and show the medias operandi by which the Lazarus of 1800 became a Dives in 1870—how, in ten short years, the little county office, how much could in 1570-how, in ten short years, the baggar John Loague can become John Loague the banker. The people of Memphis do not propose to elect as their mayor an old officeholder who can acquire riches, without the aid of Aladdin's lamp, so suddenly. For years Mr. Loague has gone hand-in-hand with all the Radical thieves along the flowery-paths of office. He has reveled with them in the vaulte of the the actonishing financial achievements by which small offices have enriched mendicants. For years the Radicals plundered the tax-payers of Shelby county. John Luague was a formidable member of the partnership. His partners helped themselves, and it seems Loague did something more than hold the doors open. If this most distinguished representative of the old Radical plunderers should be elected mayor of Memphis the same hands that enriched their proprietor, while county cours cierk will add to his coffers. The place-hunters and contractors would use him as robbers use a small boy, whom they push through the pantry window, to open the door far them from the inside. The money fleeced from the people will be levied to provide for the purpose of the liberally expended for the purp the liberally expended for the purpose of securing a position to rob them again.

The effort will be successful unless our people register, and vote and work for John Johnson.

The undersigned takes occasion, in this connection, to thank the public for past favors, and to assure all persons having claims in the hands of the late firm of Moyers & Dearlek for collection, as well as those having claims of any sort which have not yet been presented, that it will be his constant endeavor to press business with the timest diligence, and to give ratisfaction to all parties intrusting business to him. It is with pleasure that he notes a growing disposition on the part of the General Government to deal in a manner more liberal with those who sinfered loss of property during the latewar, and it is likewise a source of gratification that the prospects are good for an early settlement of all meritorious pension and bounty claims. It is also worthy of note that a considerable number of citisens of foreign birth living among us, who have suffered loss and damage of person and property during the war, are now provided with prompt and efficient means of redress by the Treaty of Washington of May 8, 1811. With these improved iscillates, it is to be hoped that all worthy distins will in future meet more prompt stention, and be brought to final sett ement with less difficulties and delays than ever besters.
